SAN FRANCISCO'S THEATER COMPANY

American Conservatory Theater, San Francisco's Tony Award-winning nonprofit theater, nurtures the art of live theater through dynamic productions, intensive actor training, and ongoing community engagement. We embrace our responsibility to conserve, renew, and reinvent our rich theatrical traditions, while exploring new artistic forms and communities. Founded by William Ball, a pioneer of the regional theater movement, A.C.T. opened in San Francisco in 1967. We have since performed more than 400 productions to more than seven million people.

Hailed as the "perfect playhouse," the beautiful Geary Theater has been our home since the beginning. When the 1989 Loma Prieta earthquake ripped the roof apart, San Franciscans raised a record-breaking $30 million to rebuild the theater. The Geary reopened in 1996 with The Tempest, directed by Carey Perloff, who took over as A.C.T.'s third artistic director in 1992 after the retirement of Edward Hastings.

Perloff's tenure was marked by translations of classical works; cross-disciplinary performances and international collaborations; and theater made by, for, and about the Bay Area. Exploring powerful stories by celebrated artists and introducing audiences to extraordinary emerging voices in American theater continues under A.C.T.'s current artistic director, Pam MacKinnon.

A.C.T.'s 50-year-old Conservatory, led by Melissa Smith, is at the center of our work. Our three-year, fully accredited Master of Fine Arts Program is at the forefront of America's actor training programs. Our Summer Training Congress attracts students from around the world, while the San Francisco Semester offers a unique study-abroad opportunity for undergraduates. Other programs include Studio A.C.T.—our expansive course of theater study for adults—and the Professional Development Training Program, which offers actor training for companies seeking to elevate employees' business performance skills. Our alumni often grace our mainstage and perform around the Bay Area, as well as on stages and screens nationwide.

A.C.T. brings the benefits of theater-based arts education to more than 17,000 Bay Area students and educators each year. Director of Education & Community Programs Elizabeth Brodersen oversees the world-famous Young Conservatory (students ages 8–19) and our ACTsmart education programs, including the Student Matinee (SMAT) program that has brought hundreds of thousands of young people to A.C.T. performances since 1968. We also provide touring Will on Wheels Shakespeare productions, teaching-artist residencies, in-school workshops, and study materials to Bay Area schools and community-based organizations.

With the appointment of Artistic Director Pam MacKinnon and Executive Director Jennifer Bielstein, our continuing commitment to the development of new work and new artists, and our increased presence in the Central Market neighborhood with The Strand and The Costume Shop theaters, A.C.T. plays a leadership role in securing the future of theater for San Francisco and the nation.

FROM THE ARTISTIC AND EXECUTIVE DIRECTORS

Welcome to Men on Boats!

When I was 27, I moved to New York after remounting a large Broadway musical in Germany. I thought I'd step into the Broadway community, but instead I found an artistic home in the downtown scene. I use the word downtown, instead of the term off-off-Broadway, because our aim was not to be in conversation with Broadway, but to make theater specific to who we were in the moment, pushing how stories could be told with ambitious imaginations and small budgets.

I became the go-to director for a brand new company called Clubbed Thumb, led then by two actors who had just received their MFAs from UC San Diego, where we had met. Clubbed Thumb's mission was, and still is, to make "funny, strange, and provocative" plays with great roles for both men and women. Twenty years later, I was chair of Clubbed Thumb's board when the company developed Jaclyn Backhaus's Men on Boats—it became a festival hit and helped launch Jaclyn's career.

Men on Boats reminds me that the word "play" is a verb to be activated, wrestled with, and enjoyed. There are no men, there are no boats, but there they are in our imagination, vivid and strong. It's a play that piques my huge respect for the author's craft and platform for performance. It also makes me laugh out loud. I am thrilled to produce it at A.C.T. with an all-local cast of women, directed by the super-exciting rising star Tamilla Woodard.

Next up at The Strand is Her Portmanteau, by M.F.A. Program alumna (class of 2009) Mfoniso Udofia, directed by Victor Malana Maog. This is an immigrant story that reminds us that coming to America can be as much about what you leave behind as what you are coming to. It is the fourth play in a nine-play family cycle. We have partnered with Magic Theatre, which is producing the fifth, In Old Age, also directed by Victor. This spring, Bay Area audiences can "binge watch" these stories, seeing two actresses portray the mother character at different points in her life. I'm also excited to write that A.C.T. has commissioned Mfoniso to write the seventh play. This is an artist with a long-standing relationship with A.C.T., who is as thrilled for her homecoming as I am.

See you at The Strand,

Pam MacKinnon
Artistic Director

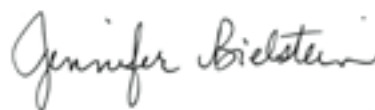

Dear Friends,

What I find so exciting about Jaclyn Backhaus's script for Men on Boats is how she has infused a sense of adventure at every turn. The (true!) story alone—a skilled, one-armed explorer teaming up with a ragtag band of pioneers to chart the great American West—is filled with enough adventure to power a big-budget, action-packed, thrill-a-minute movie. But Backhaus charged herself, and any set of artists taking on her play, to rethink the very conventions of modern theatrical storytelling. From inviting set designers to embrace an aesthetic of playful nonrealism to the proclamation that all actors are to be non-cisgender white men, Men on Boats demands that the artists—and audiences—take a leap into the unknown and prepare for a wild ride.

It is fitting that Men on Boats is having its Bay Area premiere at The Strand Theater, a venue with a wild past, and an even more adventurous future. As an historic movie theater, its near-final act was hosting infamous midnight showings of The Rocky Horror Picture Show—a groundbreaking event that pushed gender identity to new heights in popular culture. Since its reopening as A.C.T.'s Market Street home in 2015, The Strand has played host to a series of boundary-pushing journeys. Whether through a surreal dive into the underworld in The Unfortunates; a continent-hopping, road-trip comedy in Vietgone; or the New Strands Festival—where dozens of new and in-process plays by the freshest voices in American theater have been presented—audiences who wander into our transparent lobby step into an adventure.

If this is your first visit to A.C.T., welcome aboard! For those returning to us as part of a multiyear journey through the American theater landscape, thank you for helping us stay above the rapids. I invite all our audiences to explore—through our Conservatory, our new play development programs, or our multiple InterACT events. A.C.T. offers adventure at every turn.

I look forward to seeing you at the theater.

Growing up in Arizona, playwright Jaclyn Backhaus often flipped through her dad’s copy of John Wesley Powell’s 1869 expedition journal. When she joined Clubbed Thumb’s Early Career Writers’ Group in 2013, she knew that this 99-day journey down the Green and Colorado Rivers was the adventure play she had to write. We sat down with Backhaus before the start of rehearsals to discover her love of history and the creative process.

THE SPIRIT OF THE WATER

AN INTERVIEW WITH PLAYWRIGHT JACLYN BACKHAUS

BY ELSPETH SWEATMAN

At what point did you know Men on Boats would feature no men and no boats?

[Laughs] From the very first draft. Halfway through, I started to question why I was writing the play. I started asking, “What is it about adventure stories that’s so exciting to me?” It’s because this story is something that I [as a woman] wouldn’t have been able to take part in. So that initial hypothesis—of casting the play with actors who “wouldn’t be in this story normally”—fell into place very early on.

One of the challenging aspects of this play is portraying the dangers that the crew faces. How did you go about crafting those scenes?

In the early draft of the play, the rapids were one long choral piece; everyone was saying every line all the time. I was trying to capture the spirit of the water with that texture, but it became clear that for the play to feel connected, the rapids had to tell a story of the psyches, minds, and perspectives of the characters who were on them. Each rapid needed to serve a different function. A character needed to leave a rapid feeling differently about their experience on the river. It took awhile to capture that feeling of, “Whoa, is this what it’s like being on the river?” You don’t know what’s coming, you don’t know how you’re going to get out of the messes, and then [exhales], the relief when it’s over.

What advice do you give creative teams about Men on Boats?

I always go back to the advice that Will Davis, the director of the original production, would give the actors: don’t think of what kind of man you would be, but what kind of explorer you are. That grounds people’s performances and lessens the weight of performing gender or performing a commentary on gender. It makes actors engage a little bit more with the task at hand, of the circumstances of being in each rapid rather than what the piece is trying to say about masculinity or Manifest Destiny. My hope is that the play allows people to forget that it’s seemingly such a big change, and get immersed in the characters themselves.

Several of your plays look at historical tropes through a contemporary lens. What do you think the past can tell us about the present?

It’s something that I’m continually mulling over. With each project, I’m learning more and more about what history actually is, you know, the fact that it’s stories in the same way that I’m telling stories. It was documented and preserved by someone who wasn’t completely objective, who had specific intentions and motivations. That erasure of histories and stories can be very purposeful. That’s part of the reason I gravitate toward writing in a contemporary voice; it helps me to process, continually learn, and highlight that we’re looking at particular stories through a lens that’s not aiming to be objective.

I’ve always loved history and realizing as I’m writing something, “Oh my god, this resonates with my life so much.” Those kinds of things, if we allow them to, will enable us to find more and more connections. There’s something exciting about realizing, “I never really thought about that history this way.” Or, “I’ve been to Lake Powell, but I had no idea that there was a guy named Powell.” It’s fun to crack open those connections and then watch them get deeper and deeper and deeper. ■

INVENTION AND DISCOVERY

AN INTERVIEW WITH DIRECTOR TAMILLA WOODARD
BY SIMON HODGSON

For theater-maker Tamilla Woodard, the audience's experience is her benchmark. "When theater is successful," she says, "we laugh, we cry, we forget where we've been. That's what I'm after."

As the cofounder of PopUP Theatrics, Woodard is rapidly developing a reputation as a director who really draws audiences into her stories, whether in immersive works staged in hotel rooms or on proscenium stages such as A.C.T.'s Rembe Theater. As Woodard prepared for rehearsals, we spoke with her about the voyage of exploration in Men on Boats.

What makes Men on Boats a show for a Bay Area audience?

The Bay is still a frontier, not only across the physical environment, but also the political and social justice environments. It's a place of adventure, a place where people find unknown territory, and a place where movements start. It's the perfect city for this play.

As you research the journals of these 19th-century explorers, how do you view these characters with a modern-day lens?

I'm intrigued by them, I root for them, and I have compassion for them. I also have the privilege of my modern-day point of view, which allows me to recognize the bias their worldview was based on. I can see the things Powell dismissed, couldn't comprehend, or looked over. It's not that those nuances weren't there. It's that there was no system for him to see what was in front of him. We can't value what we can't understand. If I am unable to recognize you as valuable, you don't "count" to me.

I think of all the Native American tribes the expedition likely encountered. In so many American stories of expansion, the Native peoples are made villains or written out of the narrative entirely. Although they inhabited, navigated, and took care of the land—and maybe even cared for these adventurers—the white explorers didn't count them in their historic stories of survival. In one of my favorite scenes, the crew asks the Ute tribe leaders—Chief Tsauwiat and his wife, The Bishop—to take on a burden. Because the white explorers don't perceive the measure of their intelligence, the Chief and The Bishop can be as sarcastic and insulting as they want because, ultimately, Powell thinks he's the big shot and they are the savages. This is just one of the many brilliant moments in this play.

How is Backhaus shifting the audience's perspective for adventure tales such as Powell's?

Often, hero stories have been the territory of male, cisgender [a person whose gender identity is the same as the gender assigned at birth] writers, mainly white men. The hero is always the guy who gets to say what happened. It's essential that we make room for other people's experience of history. Jaclyn [Backhaus] proposes a space for an adventure story to be occupied by bodies and psychological experiences that are not those of white men. Men on Boats is an invitation to acknowledge that we're all performing gender and we can unperform it as well. Power lies in the hands of the person who gets to say what happened. It's critical that we keep our eye on that because people can be shut out of their own narratives.

In what ways can theater-makers help audiences experience untold stories from different communities?

In the script of Men on Boats, Jaclyn requires that the cast be made up of "racially diverse actors who are female-identifying, trans-identifying, genderfluid, and/or non-gender-conforming." In a story about white guys conquering the Grand Canyon, this may feel a bit disorienting, but it allows us to see something differently. That disorientation invites illumination, and that recognition spurs laughter. When we laugh, we physically take in more oxygen, and things move through us differently—perhaps more coherently. I like putting an audience in a place that's filled with disorientation and recognition.

What inspires you about American theater today?

Oh gosh! I'm inspired that audiences are beginning to widen in terms of perspective. When I'm sitting in the middle of an audience that actually looks like America, it feels wonderful. I work to create a wider perspective of storytelling and story purveyors, and an audience that has different points of access to these stories—familiarity, curiosity, even disagreement. The more often we can tell each other who we are, the less suspicious we become of each other. Let us deliver stories that represent the entire collection of humanity. Theater is a place where you're reminded that you are of value, that you count. And that the person next to you counts too, even if you didn't see them sitting there before. ■

THE IMPORTANCE OF PLAY

MEN ON BOATS TEACHING ARTISTS INSPIRE STUDENTS

BY ANNIE SEARS

Men on Boats is a play in all senses of the word. It requires designers to play with the toys of their craft—from paint to lights to fabric to sound waves. It plays with traditional gender roles. It asks that audiences pretend to be somewhere they're not, that actors pretend to be historical figures they're not. But some of the actors in Men on Boats are doing more than playing characters; they're also using play to empower local youth.

“As we get older, we go from a playful, no-inhibitions attitude to one of self-consciousness,” says current A.C.T. M.F.A. Program actor and teaching artist Katherine Romans, who plays Bradley. “That sense of play happens naturally with junior high students, but we have to reintroduce high schoolers to their own sense of play.”

“In a class where it's pretend and where you're surrounded by people who are also taking risks, it's safe to practice expressing emotion,” says Lauren Spencer, a local actor and teaching artist who plays O.G. Howland and Tsauwiat. “I find that joy is sometimes the hardest for students to access, and through play, we allow them the space to practice.” Both Romans and Spencer are local teaching artists, supplementing their onstage work with classroom work. Sometimes, they partner with schoolteachers to enrich the core curriculum with theatrical activities. Other times, they lead classes specifically in theater. But in all cases, they craft lesson plans that invite students to explore their talents and personal values through play.

“Being a teacher is hard,” says Spencer, “but it's a vulnerable, challenging, and glorious thing to shepherd students as they explore creativity, empathy, and self-confidence.” Spencer has been teaching in the Bay Area for eight years. She's worked with organizations including TheatreFIRST, StageWrite, and Midnight Shakespeare at the West Oakland Civicorps, and taught in A.C.T.'s Young Conservatory and Downtown High School residency program, in addition to directing Black Butterflies, our 2017 Collaborative Youth Arts Project with Destiny Arts Center. She now develops curricula for several Bay Area organizations. “Teaching is an art form in and of itself,” says Spencer. “And like any other art, it requires ongoing development.”

Recognizing this need for continual growth, A.C.T.'s Young Conservatory Director Jill MacLean is implementing professional development seminars for her teaching artists, focused on choosing diverse classroom material. Students in our M.F.A. Program also receive training in pedagogy and cultural humility as part of our Citizen Artist curriculum, and they craft lesson plans for our local residency programs. Romans, for example, has taught in our Downtown High School residency, where she strives to “leave students feeling hungry, curious, and confident.”

Romans and her fellow teaching artists are accomplishing just that. “In their end of semester surveys,” says A.C.T. School Programs Manager Vanessa Ramos, “students at Downtown say that they’ve learned companionship, perseverance, communication, respect, and fun.”

A.C.T. is also a member of the Arts Education Alliance of the Bay Area (AEABA), a partnership between 71 local arts organizations, including the Oakland Symphony, Prescott

Circus Theatre, San Francisco Opera, San Francisco Ballet, and SF Jazz. AEABA harnesses the Bay Area’s innovation and thriving arts scene to help provide students with the skills to become creative members of their communities. “It’s important to reach out to younger generations,” says Todd Berman, director of AEABA. “A.C.T. is one of the leaders in using the arts to elevate student voices and collaborating with schools across the city. People look to A.C.T. for that creativity and leadership in how effective arts education can be.”

AEABA supports teaching artists by hosting myriad events—from administrator panels on retaining teaching artists to workshops on cultural sensitivity, resource fairs, and teaching artist open calls. A yearly favorite is Curriculum Slam: teachers have seven minutes to present 14 slides encapsulating one of their lesson plans. Past presentations have included creating sensory boxes for preschoolers and using memes in high school classrooms to expose the problematic online portrayal of people of color. AEABA and A.C.T.’s programs connect teaching artists to one another, and their interaction encourages the sense of play present in their teaching and performing.

“The skill and the craft they bring to the classroom—they’re practicing it onstage,” says Elizabeth Brodersen, A.C.T.’s director of Education & Community Programs. “Teaching artists are essential to the future of arts in schools.” ■

MASTER ARTIST(S)

STUDIO A.C.T. THINKS LOCAL, ACTS GLOBAL

BY SIMON HODGSON

Studio A.C.T. Director Mark Jackson didn't know it at the time, but even as a kid growing up in Placerville, California, he was devising theater productions. "I used to play with my big brother. We'd kick our parents' cars out of the garage and turn it into a stage. We were always making things out of what we found. That continued into my theater-making career."

Today, Jackson is demonstrating the same fearless creativity in conjuring a sparkling new season of theater arts classes for adults. "My aim is to connect Studio A.C.T. to the work on our mainstages," he says. This January, Studio A.C.T. acting students can draw parallels between the art taking place on the Geary stage and their own artistic explorations, by studying the work of playwright Edward Albee in a class that comes with a ticket to Edward Albee's Seascape.

This continues the mainstage connection that Jackson established last season, when iconic Bay Area actor, director, and teacher Margo Hall taught Performing Women's Voices. This popular class investigates the work of female playwrights such as Father Comes Home from the Wars (Parts 1, 2 & 3) playwright Suzan-Lori Parks.

Alongside these courses, Jackson is introducing Bay Area theater students to a series of expert artists through master classes. In the last few months, Studio A.C.T. students have attended classes with acclaimed Taiwanese performance artist Pao-Chang Tsai (visiting the city for the San Francisco International Arts Festival) and Thurman E. Scott, the founder of the Actors Theatre Workshop who trained with celebrated acting teacher Stella Adler.

One upcoming master artist this season is performance artist Monique Jenkinson, whose class, Pry Bars for Creative Jams, will help dancers, actors, and theater-makers of all stripes to create original work when they're stuck for ideas. In February, look out for a rare master class with Tom Ross, the artistic director of Aurora Theatre Company, who cut his teeth with legendary Public Theater founder Joe Papp. This class will focus on developing producing and directing skills—"Keeping the drama onstage," says Jackson, quoting Ross.

With more master classes from international artists lined up for spring 2019, this is an A.C.T. program that continues to evolve. "Studio A.C.T. is an access point," says Jackson, "for creative people to connect to the work that's going on not only at A.C.T., but also in the world." ■

A.C.T. TODAY

TELLING UNTOLD STORIES

A CONVERSATION WITH
MEN ON BOATS PRODUCER
AND A.C.T. TRUSTEE
ROBINA RICCITIELLO

BY ANNIE SEARS

Robina Riccitiello built a career as a journalist because she cares about stories, especially stories the media overlooks. Five years ago, that passion fueled Riccitiello to join A.C.T.'s Board of Trustees because she saw A.C.T. "unleashing the powerful voices of artists who didn't have many opportunities." Now, she also produces. We caught up with Riccitiello to hear about why she loves being involved at A.C.T.

You produced The Unfortunates in 2016, and you're producing both mainstage shows here at The Strand this season. Why do you produce?

Producers get a behind-the-scenes glimpse. You attend the first rehearsal, where the director, playwright, and designers share their vision for the show. After hearing the design presentations for Men on Boats, I'm especially excited about the set and costumes. It's cool that the costume designer was inspired in part by pulp novels. And I'm excited to see The Strand transformed into the majestic Grand Canyon. The Unfortunates was one of my favorites. It's a fantasy, wartime musical about love, fear, and the plague. Sometimes, it's best to focus on what we don't immediately understand and what makes us squirmy. That show challenged audiences and made them discuss what they'd just seen. That's the best part of theater—you can't wait to talk about it after the curtain closes.

Is that why you chose to produce Men on Boats and Her Portmanteau?

Yes. I love history and stories that challenge our assumptions. Men on Boats tells a story based on an important expedition, but turns history on its head by taking iconic figures from the past and dragging them into the future. It's so fantastical—the idea of putting women in these parts that were acted in real life by men. For Her Portmanteau, I'm excited to support work by one of our M.F.A. Program graduates. Mfoniso Udofia creates complex characters that teach us about ourselves and our world.

Why is it important to support new works written by women?

The fact that both plays are written by women is secondary to the fact that they are great plays. But yes, bringing new stories that will educate, inform, and create deeper understanding for our audiences is why I serve as an A.C.T. board member. ■

A.C.T. PROFILES

PAM MACKINNON (Artistic Director) is celebrating her inaugural season as A.C.T.'s fourth artistic director. She is a Tony, Drama Desk, and Obie Award-winning director, having directed upwards of 70 productions around the country, off-Broadway, and on Broadway. Her Broadway credits include Beau Willimon's The Parisian Woman (with Uma Thurman), Amelie: A New Musical, David Mamet's China Doll (with Al Pacino), Wendy Wasserstein's The Heidi Chronicles (with Elisabeth Moss), Edward Albee's A Delicate Balance (with Glenn Close and John Lithgow), Edward Albee's Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf? (Tony Award, Drama Desk Award, and Outer Critics Circle nomination), and

Bruce Norris's Clybourne Park (Obie Award for Excellence in Direction, Tony and Lucille Lortel nominations). After five years as board chair of Clubbed Thumb, a downtown New York theater company dedicated to new American plays, she sits on its advisory board. She is an artistic associate of the Roundabout Theatre Company, a Usual Suspect of New York Theatre Workshop, and an alumna of the Drama League, Women's Project, and Lincoln Center Theater's Directors' Labs. She is also the executive board president of the Stage Directors and Choreographers Society (SDC). She grew up in Toronto, Canada, and Buffalo, New York, acted through her teens, but majored in economics and political science at the University of Toronto and briefly pursued a PhD in political science at UC San Diego, before returning to her true passion: theater.

JENNIFER BIELSTEIN (Executive Director) joins A.C.T. with more than 25 years of theater management experience. She is currently president of the League of Resident Theatres (LORT)—an organization that represents 74 theaters nationwide—having previously served as LORT's vice president; chair of its Equity, Diversity, and Inclusion Committee; secretary; and on multiple union negotiating teams. Before relocating to the Bay Area, Bielstein was the managing director of the Guthrie Theater in Minneapolis, managing director of Actors Theatre of Louisville, and executive director of Writers Theatre in Chicago. She has also worked for Steppenwolf Theatre Company, About Face Theatre, Northlight Theatre, and the Lincoln Park Zoo, as well as serving on the boards of the League of Chicago

Theatres, Theatre Forward, the Arts and Cultural Attractions Council, and other civic boards. She has received the Center for Nonprofit Excellence's Pyramid Award of Excellence in Leadership, and has been recognized as one of Louisville's Business First's 40 Under 40. In 2017, Bielstein was named by Twin Cities Business as a Person to Know, and, in 2018, Minnesota Business magazine named her as a Real Power 50 member. Bielstein is a graduate of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, attended Stanford's Graduate School of Business Executive Program for Nonprofit Leaders in the Arts, and earned an MBA from Bellarmine University, where she received the MBA Faculty Merit Award and was inducted into Beta Gamma Sigma, the honor society for business programs.

MELISSA SMITH (Conservatory Director, Head of Acting) has served as Conservatory director and head of acting in the Master of Fine Arts Program at A.C.T. since 1995. During that time, she has overseen the expansion of the M.F.A. Program from a two- to a three-year course of study and the further integration of the M.F.A. Program faculty and student body with A.C.T.'s artistic wing, while also teaching and directing in the M.F.A. Program, Summer Training Congress, and Studio A.C.T. In 2013, she launched the San Francisco Semester, a semester-long intensive that deepens students' acting. In 2016, she was honored by Theatre Bay Area as one of 40 individuals who have changed the face of Bay Area theater. Prior to assuming leadership of the Conservatory, Smith was the director of the Program in Theater and Dance at Princeton University. She has taught acting classes to students of all ages in various colleges, high schools, and studios around the continental United States, at the Mid-Pacific Institute in Hawaii, New York University's La Pietra campus in Florence, and the Teatro di Pisa in San Miniato, Italy. She is featured in Acting Teachers of America: A Vital Tradition. Also a professional actor, she has performed regionally at the Hangar Theatre, A.C.T., the California Shakespeare Festival, and Berkeley Repertory Theatre; in New York at Primary Stages and Soho Rep.; and in England at the Barbican Centre in London and Birmingham Repertory Theatre. Smith holds a BA from Yale College and an MFA in acting from Yale School of Drama.
